Decision By Rosemond Could Mean One Black Left On City Council

The final decision by Columbus City Councilman Dr. John Rosemond, not to seek re-election may have damaged the Democratic Party's chances of maintaining control of the council, and the decision left the distinct possibility that one black could remain on the legislative body.

Unless a black is selected by the Franklin County Party to campaign for council with Democrats Charles Mentel and M.D. Portman, who are seeking re-election as incumbents, Jerry Hammond could be the only black on council.

Hammond could not be reached for comment, while party chairman John E. Jones said the candidate with the best chances of winning would be selected. Political observers are speculating that John Maloney, a white and director of the St. Stephens Community House, would get the nod. Maloney unsuccessfully campaigned for city council last year, but lost in part because he could not pick up black votes. He is reported to have said that he welcomes the opportunity to run again.

JESSE WOOD
...might run again

Republicans, meanwhile, are hoping to capture at least one seat in this year's election to gain control of the council from the Democrats, who now hold a 4-3 majority.

A black will be on the Republican ticket, inside sources say, but no definite candidate has emerged. Jesse Wood, who campaigned for council as a Republican in 1979, has not made public whether he will run, although speculation is that Wood will devote more time to the ministry rather than politics.

Blacks who were mentioned Tuesday by Jones as possible Democratic candidates included State Rep. Otto Beatty Jr. and Attorney Napoleon Bell. It's doubtful, however, that Beatty will give up his seat in the Ohio Legislature to campaign for city council.

Shamansky Staffer Promises Blacks To Be Appointed Soon

By SHUARA WILSON

Eric Rozenman, press secretary for newly elected U.S. Rep. Bob Shamansky, said there is not cause for concern expressed by some black leaders that the Congressman has not yet appointed blacks to his staff.

The congressman has filled eight of the 18 full-time and three part time positions allocated to new members. Openings exist for a receptionist, computer operator, legislative assistant and constituent caseworker.

"We've received literally hundreds of applications from blacks. And interviewed dozens, many of who are highly qualified, competent people," Rozenman stated.

Rozenman pointed out that Shamansky has served two terms on the Columbus Urban League and realizes that blacks supported his candidacy for office.

"It's not only a matter of keeping his own political commitments but also his own personal commitments," Rozenman continued.

He said that criticism has come rather quickly. "We weren't even paying people and had no staff until last Monday."

Rozenman said there would be no limit placed on the number of blacks hired for the congressman's office and an appointment is expected to be

Suspect In Rapes Faces 13 Charges

In a case of "footprints in the snow," an 18-year-old Northside area man was tracked by police and charged with the rape, robbery and burglary that took place minutes earlier at a home on E. 23rd Ave. Richard "Rickey" Darnell Ervin of 1390 Cleveland Ave. was arrested in the basement of his home early last Wednesday morning after police followed footprints to his residence from the home on E. 23rd Ave.

Altogether, 13 charges were filed against Ervin in connection with other recent rapes, burglaries and robberies in an area bounded by Hamilton, Cleveland, 19th and 25th Aves. He was indicted on last Friday by a grand jury on four counts of rape, four counts of aggravated robbery, four counts of aggravated burglary and one count of attempted rape.

Ervin was in jail early this week with bond set at $300,000.

Police reported this account of what happened: Police responded to a call from E. 23rd Ave. early Wednesday morning after

Three Indicted On Homicide Charges

Three indictments were handed down by the Franklin County grand jury last week in connection with three separate homicides.

Helen Young, 23, was indicted on one count of murder in connection with the shooting of James Curtis Lyles, 26, of 1464 E. Main St., on New Year's Day. He was shot in the chest following an argument, according to police.

Jean Mae Davis, 32, was indicted on one count of murder in connection with the stabbing death of Cecil Pierce, 31.

Police said Pierce died of a chest wound. They said that he and Miss Davis were drinking in their apartment at 264 1/2 Miller Ave. on New Year's Day when an argument started that led to Pierce's death.

Also indicted was Mahlon Elijah Dungey in connection with the shooting death of his sister, Arlene Emily Dungey, 21, of 1330 Hildreth Ave.

Police said that Dungey, 31, and his sister argued over the use of car keys before she was shot on Jan. 5. Police said that Ms. Dungey was found clutching her 6-month-old daughter. Her 18-month-old daughter was also in the room when

Black Chamber Of Commerce Formed In City

A black Chamber of Commerce has been organized for the specific purposes of responding to the needs of black businesses and increasing the impact of blacks on Columbus' economy, the officers of the concern said Tuesday at its first meeting.

"We're very serious about making something happen," said Dr. James A. Bayfield, a dentist and chairman of the board for the Chamber. "We're the black sheep of major cities so to speak. We're a do nothing town."

In Memoriam

On the anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther King, Jr., it is fitting that we search for some meaning for us of his life and death. It is no easy task. We lack perspective; our emotions betray us. A few things seem clear, however. What national anguish his death brought was short-lived. If indeed it existed at all. We do not seem to have moved significantly toward the goals he sought or even in the direction of those goals. There has been no large enlightenment of Americans in the causes for which he gave his life, no great national resolve to finish the task of creating a decent social order.

Health Care Down In Black Community; Alcoholism Up

By C.M. McLIN
(Black Editor
Deconstructs of Ohio)

A spokesperson for the federal government said health care delivery in black areas has improved in recent years, but there is still room for improvement.

These were among the comments made at the Health Workshop conducted by the National Black Caucus of State Legislators. The Caucus held their annual meeting recently in Atlanta, Ga.

To serve the medically indigent, the Program Office for Community Health Centers has projects which include emergency medical services in urban areas, family planning, migrant health programs and community health centers.

Margaret Jordan, associate bureau director of Community Health Center, said the black mortality and morbidity rates are high because they do not take advantage of services, the resources are lagging behind, and because numerous hospitals are closing.

State Rep. John Thompson, D-Cleveland, explained containment measures are being examined by the Ohio Legislature. Thompson was chairman of an ad hoc committee to investigate rising medical costs and was a member of the Joint Select Committee on

C.J. McLIN
...writes about decline of health care in black communities across U.S.

Health Care Costs Containment.

Thompson noted that Ohio is the only state in the nation that does not require hospitals to be licensed, which can have an effect on the quality of services, and he suggested that hospitals could save money by sharing the cost and use of expensive equipment. The Cleveland legislator is sponsoring legislation to deal with these health related issues.

A specialist from the area of alcoholism prevention and treatment described the social impact produced by the excessive use of alcohol in the black community. He reported that:

Eight out of 10 arrests with a weapon are alcohol related; 10 percent of the black gross national product is spent on alcohol; black communities have three times as many liquor outlets as there are in white communities; and 11 out of 12 stabbings in black areas are alcohol related.

Suggested approaches to curb alcohol abuses include attacking the problem at the high school level through education, improving employment opportunities and eliminating racism.

The major recommendation to emerge from the Health Workshop was for the creation of an informal consortium composed of legislative and medical leaders. The informal arrangement would help curtail bickering over who is going to be in charge.

The two groups could meet in a social setting periodically to discuss problems and then actively pursue a solution. A successful model for this political and medical consortium can be found in California.

LETTERS OF APPRECIATION are presented to Barbara A. Williams of Bell Telephone Laboratories by James A. Johnson, right, on behalf of Dynamic Leadership Inc., and State Rep. Dean Conley on behalf of the Ohio House of Representatives. She was honored as an outstanding African for her extensive involvement in community betterment activities and her efforts on behalf of affirmative action programs at Bell Laboratories. Conley also voiced support for affirmative action, stating "In some political circles it is popular to attack affirmative action. However, those wishing to abandon those programs will find no solace and no support in my office."

In his annual assessment of black business and economic development, National Business League President Theodore R. Hagans Jr. predicted a continuation of grim business conditions for blacks for 1981.

Citing the unusual volatility of the American economy, Hagans declared, "The conditions that have dampened the U.S. economy now pose a devastating threat to the black and minority business community."

The leader of the nation's oldest business organization insisted that the continued exclusion of blacks and other minorities from the nation's economic agenda would only serve to hamper the country's economic recovery.

Reviewing the failure to relate black and minority economic development to such broad economic issues as urban revitalization, unemployment and inflation.

"Within the short span of 10 months, this nation has been shaken by unprecedented peaks in the prime lending rate; in fact, the record high level of 20 percent reached last April has now been exceeded by a new high of 21 percent and may rise even further by the end of the month," he said.

He concluded by saying, "This nation cannot hope to achieve its fullest economic potential, nor hope to succeed on its journey to economic recovery."

ECCO counselor, Jewell Barron, ECCO executive director, Bertha M. Morgan, club treasurer, JoAnn Howell, club member, Gwen Mason, program director, and Phelton G. Simmons, health educator.

Sickle Cell, Dental Programs Begin At ECCO Health Center

The ECCO Family Health Center, 1166 E. Main St., has added a new service to medical offerings. Region C of the Ohio Sickle Cell and Health Association at the center is providing free pneumococcal vaccine to persons with sickle cell anemia.

Jewell Barron, executive director of the center, said the service is available through funds received from the United Way of Franklin County, which are used as part of a match for the federal grant to the health association.

In addition, she said, a dental program is offering inner-city pre-school children preventive dental services. The program is for children age 3 to 6 and the children must be in school, she said.

"The concept is the children in this age group don't have severe dental problems. If we can serve them at this point, it won't be as expensive later in life," Ms. Barron said. About 1500 students can be served each year in the program, she added.

The vaccine program can serve all residents of Franklin County, the director said. "The vaccine provides protection against 80 percent of the most common and serious strains of pneumococcal pneumonia to which sickle cell patients are highly susceptible," she explained.

The health center provides a series of medical services in addition to its new offerings. That point and the value of ECCO to the Columbus area were pointed out during the 10th anniversary of the center last September.

Dr. Otis Moss, pastor of Olivet Institutional Baptist Church of Cleveland, said the center has compensated for the shortage of black physicians. He said for every 3,000 to 5,000 blacks, only one black physician is available, compared to a white physician for every 600 to 700 white patients.

Ms. Barron said ECCO was the first community health center in Columbus and that it continues to extend medical care throughout the metropolitan area and its Women, Infants and Children (WIC) and sickle cell anemia programs are of statewide interest.

The center has a staff of about 100 with six physicians, a dentist and mid-level dental practitioners, technologists and X-ray technicians, Ms. Barron said.

Family health care has been the emphasis of the center with the services being provided as the lowest possible costs, she said.

The center is directed by a board of directors of 18 to 25 members.

Disappointments are inevitable if you have ambition or hope.

46 Students From Nigeria Study Education At OSU

Forty-six students from Nigeria's Bauchi State will arrive in Columbus next week to begin work on bachelor of science degrees in secondary education at Ohio State University.

The students, many of whom are elementary or secondary education teachers, will study for 12 academic quarters or until they have satisfied requirements for their degrees.

Arrangements are now being made for 60 more students from Bauchi to begin course work for degrees in education this summer.

Tuition and living expenses for the students are being paid by a $634,960 grant from the Nigerian Ministry of Education.

The Bauchi State, which models its schools after American systems, has made great strides in education, said Donald Anderson, associate dean of educational administration at Ohio State. The number of secondary schools in the African state has doubled in the last year, he said.

Ohio State's College of Education was selected by the Nigerians because of its high national ranking.

William Holloway, professor of special services and educational administration, is serving as director of the education program. Richard Kelsey, associate professor of special services, is the associate director.

current effort and it is a battle that can be won.

The reason it is worth fighting for is the same reason that we should always be willing to fight for principal and precedent. It is a part of the vigilance we should constantly keep at the highest level. Not only should we search for infractions of our rights, expose them and seek redress, but we should also search for opportunities to glorify the deserving among our race.

It is part, in essence, of our survival strategy. As many of us from Columbus as is possible should join the Stevie Wonder March in Washington on Jan. 15 - Martin Luther King's birthday. And those of us who simply cannot go should, as WVKO's James Evans suggests, keep our headlights on whenever we drive on that day.

And what more appropriate leader of such a march could there be than the black guru, Stevie Wonder.

One of the cuts on his latest album, "Hotter Than July," is "Happy Birthday." In this tune Stevie Wonder sings, "I just never understood how a man who died for good could not have a day that would be set aside for his recognition..." And in another portion of the tune, he says, "Why has there never been a holiday that peace is celebrated all throughout the world?"

Martin Luther King is internationally recognized for his human rights and peace efforts. Should he not also be recognized at home? Legalize it or not, we sing with great joy... "Happy Birthday to ya."

By JIM ROBINSON

Of course they should legalize it! But whether they do or not is immaterial. We know that it's cause for a great and gala celebration day.

His credits need no recitation. They are etched in our living souls. Has there been greater hope for our people in modern times? Hardly!

What dignity! What single-mindedness of purpose! What love! What dedication! "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." - John.

In Martin's case, he gave his life not only for black people but for the unrealized American dream as well. He therefore is unquestionably a national hero of greater stature than any presently honored with an official holiday.

Martin is not the only black person deserving of national recognition, but the battle for his official recognition is worth this

Amos H. Lynch, treasurer and attorney Ben Epy, parliamentarian. These seven newly elected officials are ably supported by 29 other black business and professional men in comprising one of the oldest and most popular black social/service clubs in the city.

Merry Makers Club, Inc. To Mark 55th Anniversary

The members, families and friends of the Merry Makers Club, Inc. will celebrate the venerable organization's 55th anniversary during 1981. Plans are already in the formative stages for a year-long slate of social and service activities.

During recent installation of officers, newly elected Merry Maker president, Roosevelt Carter cautioned that faced with rising inflation his group and clubs like them are going to have to do a bit of belt tightening.

"Social clubs and black ones, especially," Carter emphasized, "must look to new directions." "We are going to have to work more toward in-group programs, which will bring about more comradery between ourselves and families."

Carter also predicted that by having to circumvent financial problems caused by the sagging economy, the 36 black business and professional men who comprise the 55-year-

Bates reasoned it was time to step down to make way for a younger member of the group. "I enjoyed it," Bates reminisced.

old club would be more the better for it.

"We will not only strengthen our organization in this way, but we will also be able to more than adequately meet the social and entertainment needs of the membership," Carter promised.

In addition to Carter, the newly elected president, other new officers of the Merry Makers Club, Inc., are Charles McMurray, sergeant-at-arms; Dr. Edward J. Sullivan, vice president; Herbert Moorehead, corresponding secretary; Larry Robinson, recording secretary; Amos H. Lynch, treasurer and attorney Ben Epy, parliamentarian.

Outgoing treasurer, Wiley E. Bates Sr., was given a special salute recently during the installation ceremony in recognition of his 35 years of service as club treasurer.

Bates, a faithful and devoted Merry Maker for 44 years, has served in every elective office of the club, including president.

In a reflective mood, the congenial Bates confessed, "I enjoyed being treasurer, but I now feel it's time for me to wind down my activities and make room for a younger member of the organization to take over."

Lynch, his successor, has been a strong supporter of the club for about 15 years.

Alvin Ailey Dancers Slated; Noted Composer To Play Here

West coast composer, arranger and saxophonist Ladd McIntosh returns to Columbus to appear with the Jazz Arts Group at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Battelle Auditorium, 505 King Ave.

McIntosh's bands of the late 1960s created national attention for Ohio State University and its music school. He is on the faculty of the University of California at Northridge and the Los Angeles School of Jazz. One of his albums, entitled "67," was among the 10 best jazz records of the '60s according to The New York Times.

Tickets are available at Coyle Music, 2884 N. High St.

Jazz 'Dream Team' Slated For Performance On WBBY

The jazz program broadcast at 8 p.m. Sundays on WBBY-FM will feature a special performance by the cream of Columbus' musicians and singers as the "Jazz Dream Team" is presented on "Jazz At Muscol" Jan. 18.

The Dream Team was a creation of music historian Arnett Howard, who got his inspiration from the all star polls that were featured in the Ohio State News during the 1940s and '50s.

"Readers used to vote for their favorite musicians in various instrumental categories and the winners would be presented in a concert at the Lincoln Theater that would attract hundreds," he said. Howard, a musician and jazz 104 personality, introduced his Dream Team at the Greater Columbus Arts Festival last summer and was invited to put together a studio date for Jazz At Muscol, WBBY's commercial free showcase for local jazz talent.

The show premiered in March 1980 with the Rusty Bryant Group and has been the catalyst for at least two albums, "Rusty Rides Again" and "Jazz Jazz," with the Bob Allen Trio.

"This session is worthy of putting on record," says Howard. "It was hard work to get such great musicians into one place at an agreeable time, but when we got rolling there was the magic in the air that brings out the special efforts."

NAACP To Exhibit At Northland Mall

The Columbus Branch of the NAACP will present a "Black Awareness Weekend" Feb. 13-15 at Northland Mall that will display the contributions and achievements of blacks in America, a spokesman for the branch said.

The event will take place during normal business hours of the mall. Live entertainment will be in addition to the display, the spokesman said.

"Our major purpose in submitting this notice at this time is to afford other groups the opportunity to participate," the spokesman said, adding that groups can exhibit in the event for an entry fee of $25.

For exhibition arrangements, call the branch at 464-1108 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. weekdays.

Stage Centre's Guest Director Shares His New York Insights

Dale Shields, a New York actor who received rave reviews for his directing debut in Columbus a year ago, is back to accomplish more of the same at Columbus Stage Centre.

Shields is the guest director of "Golden Boy," which will open at Stage Centre, 855 N. Nelson Rd., at 8:30 p.m. Friday. Performances of the play will continue at 8:30 Fridays and Saturdays and 7:30 Sundays through Feb. 22.

The 10-year veteran of stage had his first contact with the theater when he directed "The Me Nobody Knows," which Columbus critics gave their overwhelming approval of.

When Carole Khan-White, executive director of Stage Centre, contacted Shields about a second appearance, he said he was anxious to return to Columbus. The appearance is made possible by a grant from the Greater Columbus Arts Council.

Working here does not compare to New York City, he said, but being able to share professional experiences with aspiring actors and actresses is a way of sharing a part of the real side of theater life, said Shields, who is originally from Cleveland where he performed at Karamu Theatre.

"When I was at Karamu, I didn't get to work with a professional director," he recalled, adding that much of what he can convey to performers at Stage Centre was not available to him until much later in his career.

"Carole invited me here to have the kids work with a professional to teach them the professional ends of theatre. I talk to them in theater terms, have them learn to work with good and bad directors, and teach them the basics of artistry," he said.

"I sat down with one student and told him the horrible things that happened to me in New York City. If he comes, he belongs. You have to have a tough skin to survive. There are 80 people who can do what you do and as well as you do. You have to get in and fight with all of that," he continued.

Shields has fought his way to appearances in the world premiere of "Lilly" at Lincoln Center, the Ann Margaret television special salute to Radio City Hall, and the movies "Heroes," "The Warriors" and "The Wiz." He has also worked with the Negro Ensemble Company, Henry Street Settlement House and the Eartha Kitt Dance Theatre Workshop.

DALE SHIELDS
...guest director

The experience has prepared Shields for his director's role here for the play based on the work of Clifford Odets. Sammie Davis Jr. had the lead role in "Golden Boy" when it appeared on Broadway in 1964 as a musical.

The play follows the life of a young black from Harlem who works his way up from a common laborer to win the boxing title which climaxes his pursuit of fame and fortune. The boxer's fight with his parents and external and internal forces in his life are like real situations, Shields noted.

He said the cast of 28 has some performers who will "get up there and make Columbus proud."

ROUGH GOING—Things get rough in the world of boxing in this scene from "Golden Boy," a play that will open at 8:30 p.m. Friday at Columbus Stage Centre. Here, from left, Holly Kennedy, Maun Kasey and Roosevelt Jenkins play the roles of Lorne, Tom and Joe (Golden Boy) respectively. For ticket reservations, call 252-1878. (KQJO PHOTO)

SINGS DIFFERENT TUNE—Nell Carter, the Tony Award-winning actress and singer who starred in the Broadway musical "Ain't Misbehavin'," plays Sgt. Micky Jones of the Fulton County Sheriff's Department, an addition to the regular cast of NBC's comedy series "L.A. Law," which airs from 8 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays on WCMH-TV4.

Ali To Fight Again

Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali and European heavyweight champ John Gardner have contracted to fight early this spring. The bout will probably take place in late March or early April in Hawaii.

Ali, who just turned in his Nevada boxing license and agreed not to seek another in that state, was scheduled to apply for a license from the Hawaiian Boxing Commission last week.

Nevada officials had threatened to force Ali's retirement in their state because of his poor performance in his Oct. 2 title fight with WBC champion Larry Holmes.

Baptist Pastors' Conference Selects Theme For Revival

By REV. A. WILSON WOOD

The Baptist Pastors' Conference of Columbus recently chose its theme for the upcoming Simultaneous Revival which begins officially April 5 in all of the participating churches. Each year at this time the program committee studies the present day trends which in a large way help to determine the need of the churches, and guide them in a prayerful consideration as to what is relevant to their spiritual and moral needs. The theme around which all of our conference efforts will be structured for the next four or five months is "God's Word -- The Need of the World for the '80s."

We believe that whatever there be in our present day society, God has the answer already defined in His word. His word already has been and yet is the solid rock upon which the Conference takes its stand, and the Christian builds his hope and pursues it relentlessly until some type of change comes.

In discussing the word of God with others of like passion and love, we have discovered that God's word will never fail. Everything else may fail and fall apart and fold up into nothingness, but the word of God abideth forever. It was Jesus, the Son of God, who said, "My word shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish that for which it was sent."

To implement the theme, the Rev. J.J. Ashburn, president of the Conference, has formed many committees to assure us and the public that this year's revival will be one of the greatest ever held in the city of Columbus. The conference has secured the use of the Veterans' Memorial Auditorium for its annual kick-off service.

Prior to now we have held this particular service at Shiloh Baptist because of the spaciousness of the sanctuary. But the Lord blessed our labors from year to year, and Shiloh can no longer accommodate the worshippers for that evening; so as the result, we have had to make other arrangements so as to give the better witness for God.

We have already agreed to fill this auditorium on the first Sunday in April in the afternoon. The Baptist Laymen of the city have been a very important factor in helping to carry out the revival by leading devotional services and witnessing in a very strong way in various places throughout the city. They will be on the job for this annual presentation.

Pryor, Mrs. Guilford To Appear In Concert For Negro Musicians

Lois Guilford and Michael Pryor, leading musicians of Columbus, will be presented in concert at the St. Paul A.M.E. Church on Sunday, Feb. 22, at 5 p.m. This program is sponsored by the National Association of Negro Musicians Inc., and is a benefit concert, the proceeds of which will be used to help fund the several types of assistance given to young musicians of Columbus, as well as to national competitions.

Chief among these are The Thomas Weldon Hill Scholarship; the "You Can Do It, Too" program wherein young people who are musically prepared perform for other young people in the Columbus Public Schools.

Mrs. Guilford, a scholarship recipient to Philander Smith College, was a former pupil in voice of the late Marian Corey Dyer. She has sung as soloist for many outstanding oratorios in the Midwest, among which are "The Ordering of Moses" presented by the Anna Howard Matthews Choir of Cincinnati; the Alma Porter Terrell Memorial Choir and the Broad Street Presbyterian Choir of Columbus.

She is now a student of Mrs. Harriet Arrowsmith of the Music Conservatory of the University of Cincinnati.

Pryor is a pianist and a student at the Ohio State University. He is the piano pupil of the noted teacher, Richard Tetley-Kardos. He has been a three time winner in the Thomas Weldon Hill Scholarship Competition.

He was a winner of the Omega Psi Phi Columbus Competition, as well as the 1980 third place winner of the national competition in the arts held by the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity in December at their National Conclave in San Francisco.

He is now on a scholarship program at the Ohio State University. Both of these performers are products of Columbus. They give of themselves unstintingly in all endeavors of service. They deserve our encouragement and our support.

Patrons are being solicited by the members as well as general admissions fee. Mrs. Kathleen Evelyn DeLoache is president of the National Association; Redvers Markham is the Secretary.

assistant project administered by the South Linden Leadership Group and Bethel.

Jail Prison Ministry Reaches Out To Blacks

Rev. Robert D. Rubinow, director of the Jail-Prison Ministry, said the goal of his program is to follow the biblical command, "Go therefore and make disciples of all nations."

The program which is financially overseen by Churches of Christ in Ohio, W. Virginia, Indiana, Michigan and Tennessee currently offers over 13,000 inmates, former inmates and their families spiritual guidance with the use of free Bible Correspondence Courses.

Rubinow said that 65 percent of the people in the program are blacks. He emphasized the need for religion in the rehabilitation process.

"We try to impress upon those in institutions that there are viable alternatives which they did not have before. They have tools besides the alcoholism and drug recovery programs," he explained.

Rev. Rubinow is a former inmate of the Ohio Penal System who was released in 1977. He studied in Christian Colleges and Church of Christ preaching schools.

Recognizing that the needs of blacks differ from the needs of whites, he said that he could interest more blacks in the ministry.

"In the Cleveland area we have (Cleveland Councilwoman) Fannie Lewis who is actively involved in jail and prison work in such areas as black rights," he said.

Air Force Reserve Alive And Well At Rickenbacker

By SHUARA WILSON

Many people think that since the U.S. Air Force left the base at Rickenbacker, that it has closed down. This is not so said James McMasters.

According to McMasters the Ohio National Guard and 302nd Wing of the Air Force Reserves continue to utilize the facilities located in the southern part of Columbus.

"81 percent of the flight time done here is by the reserves. The active duty crew didn't fly as much as we did," he said. There are 60 aircraft housed at the base.

In fact just last weekend nearly 2,000 reservists met for monthly duty. Colonel James R. Milligan, commander of the 302nd Tactical Airlift Wing said approximately 16.1 percent of the reservists are black.

Lt. Col Milun E. Grigsby who works with the social actions office is the senior black reserve officer at Rickenbacker.

He said blacks are being sought in the reserves to increase the number of minority officers. "We're beating the bushes for college graduates who can qualify for commission and past the written test and physical," he explained.

Grogby, who was on active duty in the army before enlisting in the reserves, stated that he saw that the "air force living quarters were better than those for generals in the army."

He said that the reserves offer blacks a chance to serve their country and earn money while their doing it. "It's four days pay for two days work. It's better than a part time job," he added.

Airman Evelyn Mitchell, who has the responsibility of preparing flight orders, said her three year commitment to the reserves will be finished in May of 1982.

"The most interesting part of my job is learning about the pilots and the navigators and making sure everything is taken care of for them," she explained.

Mitchell said the reserves offers opportunity for the unemployed person or someone who wants to get into a field, in which they are now employed.

"In the reserves why not let them train you. It's a guaranteed job and you know exactly what you'll be doing," she continued.

Robert Thomas, 32, has been a flight mechanic with the reserves since April of 1980. "I'd encourage everyone to get into the service whether its the reserves or active duty. The discipline they provide is something every individual needs," he said.

He was on active duty in Viet Nam, now he said he flies at least once a week. "We have local flights which are no further than the parameters of Franklin County."

Bobby Britford, 25, is a Columbus vocational education teacher who serves as a load master for the reserves. "I do the weight and balance of the airplane. I do the same thing as a computer on commercial planes."

Britford said the reserves has allowed him time to travel to places like Florida and Puerto Rico. "I couldn't have done this with my own income," he explained.

Britford said that he got into the reserves when he found that his draft number was high on the list and he decided to choose the type of military service he wanted.

All of the reservists who spoke with the Call and Post said that they liked the opportunities the reserves have to offer.

Rec Center Offers Activities For All

Approximately 100 children from elementary age to teen age take part in the recreational programs offered daily under the leadership of college educated staff at the Marion-Franklin County Recreation Center said the center's director, Robert Smith.

Smith, who earned his degree from Central State University, has worked with the community recreation programs in Columbus for nine years. He has been director of the center at 2801 Lockbourne Road since late September 1980.

"We are not only teaching kids to play but teaching them about sportsmanship. We show them it's not just the winning aspect of activities but participation in wholesome athletics," he stated.

The programs offered include gymnastics, ballet, basketball and drama. He said nearly 20 adults participate in programs like dance and slimnastics.

Smith pointed out that not all of the children who visit the center find programs of interest to them. "We find that with some people we have to work a little harder to get them interested."

Most come in and find that they can be with a lot of their friends while their learning fun things to do," he concluded.

The center is open from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. and there is a scheduled of activities available.

Blacks Hold Only One Percent Of Nation's Elected Offices

WASHINGTON--The number of black elected officials rose last year, but blacks still hold only 1 percent of those jobs. The number of black elected officials rose to nearly 5,000 last year, an increase of over 6 percent.

The Joint Center for Political Studies, a non-profit, non-partisan research group, said that 4,912 elected black officials are to be found in 43 states, the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands. Of the total, 976 of the officials are women.

Despite the gains, the report said that blacks are still "grossly underrepresented."

There are 19 black elected officials for every 100,000 blacks in the population, while there are 252 non-black elected officials for every 100,000 non-blacks in the population. There are 490,200 elective offices in all. Census Bureau figures show that blacks represent 11.8 percent of the total population. There were 17 blacks in the last Congress, and there will be 18 in the new one. Southern states and those with large urban populations remain the ones with the largest numbers of black elected officials. Leading are Mississippi, with 367, Louisiana with 363, Illinois with 298, Michigan with 284, and the District of Columbia with 261. The states with the greatest numerical increases in the number of elected officials were Mississippi with 60, Louisiana with 29, and Texas with 22. Certain states had no black elected officials at all, and they were Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, and Wyoming.

More black office holders serve at the municipal level than anywhere else. There are 2,356 officials, nearly half, in city government, with 182 being mayors.

Lincoln Heights Police Get State Safety Grant

COLUMBUS--Governor James A. Rhodes announced today that the Lincoln Heights Police Department has been awarded $12,100 in traffic safety grant monies. The funds will be used to support a locally-designed traffic law enforcement program, concentrating on areas of high accident and fatality occurrence.

The grant was made available by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and secured through the Office of the Governor's Highway Safety Representative--a division of the Ohio Department of Highway Safety.

King's Impact On Youth Will Be Speaker's Topic At Shiloh

Leonard D. Perryman, chemical monitor for Ashland Chemical Co. and pianist and assistant organist at Union Baptist Church in Urbancrest, will be guest speaker at 10 a.m. Sunday at Shiloh Baptist Church, 720 Mt. Vernon Ave.

Perryman, former member of Shiloh, will discuss the effect of the principles of the Martin Luther King Jr. movement on the youth of today.

M.L.K. hoped that "new programs for resistance would awaken future youth to build a wider unity and to channel that alliance into a revolution of love and creativity to work with all the peoples, to shape a new world." ("Trumpet of Conscience" M.L. King Jr.). He dreamed of achieving freedom and justice for the peoples of the entire world, of a non-violent revolution--all through the vanguard of black youth.

Perryman, son of Rev. and Mrs. Lindbergh Perryman, one of 10 children, is a 1976 graduate of Columbus Academy and a 1980 graduate of Capital University. He is a representative product of the future youth which Martin Luther King Jr. dreamed.

He was the recipient of the A Better Chance Scholar and Students for the Advancement of Afro-American Culture Awards.

He was a member of the Capital University Faculty, 1978-80. The C.U. Board of Regents, 1978-80, and was president of the C.U. Student Government, 1978-80. In his four years at Capital, he achieved every honor available.

He was included in the committee to search for the new president of the university, in 1979, and was the speaker at the presidential inauguration of Dr. Harvey Stegemoeller.

The public is invited to hear Perryman and to join in the Shiloh Church School Youth Division fellowship. Hattie Benefield is superintendent, and W.T. Carroll, general superintendent.

MOMENTS IN HISTORY

A. Philip Randolph founded the Negro American Labor Council in New York in 1900.

Glad Tidings Bishop Pilla

The installation last Tuesday of the Most Reverend Anthony M. Pilla as the Ninth Bishop of Cleveland, brings to this high office, a man of great dedication.

Cleveland is fortunate that one of its own is now one of its highest spiritual leaders.

The Catholic Church, during administration of Bishop James A. Hickey, played an important part in the area of human rights and racial justice.

With this understanding of local problems, Bishop Pilla is well qualified to contribute greatly to the continued progress in these areas.

In his Homily, Bishop Pilla emphasized that he wanted to be close to the people. And, he asked them to march with him in his ministry.

We congratulate Bishop Pilla on his elevation to Bishopric of the Diocese of Cleveland, and wish for him a most successful administration.

Dudley Taw Sets A Fine Example

The Negro College Fund in Cleveland has been most fortunate in getting top businessmen to chair its activities.

The contribution of Dudley Taw, as Chairman of the 1980 United Negro College Fund in Cleveland was outstanding. Dudley Taw increased local contributions to over $200,000. A new high.

That a busy industrialist like Dudley Taw believed so sincerely in the cause of Negro education to use his time and talent to raise funds for our schools, is a tribute to his concern for people.

That the East Ohio Gas Company permitted Mr. Taw to perform this public service, is reason for this public service company too, to be commended.

As long as busy men like Dudley Taw, and companies like East Ohio Gas show such concern for a worthy cause, there is hope that the cause of deserving and needy people will be heard and serviced.

Super Performance At Columbus School Board

What's happening down at the Columbus Board of Education? Our guess is that if you asked the seven board members, you would receive seven different and conflicting answers to that question. Maybe none satisfactory.

That is more or less how the board has operated for the past year. You go your way and I'll go mine, board members seem to say, except of course when it appears the board can make an issue black and white. Then look for the five white members to square off against the two black members.

While the disagreements among board members are philosophical and well founded in some instances, it has been the brewing personality battles among board members that has made the public meetings an inviting item for reporters. This has produced bold headlines which don't mean much to the parent who is concerned about his or her child in the school system.

Parents could care less about the personal antics of some members who continue to pursue outdated and discriminatory policies. One policy -- if it is such -- that we hope is not pursued by the new board President is that of endorsing and supporting in toto the actions of the superintendent.

Out-going president Virginia Prentice, according to a newspaper report, says that it is the board president's job to stand behind the superintendent. That's nonsense of the worst kind. It's all board members' job and responsibility to hold the superintendent and his staff accountable to the children of the system and to the public.

If board members view their function as nothing more than a rubber stamp for the superintendent, then they should get off the board. It has been board member Bill Moss's contention that the school system has been unresponsive to the black community because board members have gone along with just about anything that the superintendent has recommended.

Well, if Mr. Moss is correct, maybe we should be electing the superintendent rather than having him appointed by the board. We would then have control over what the superintendent does.

We at least have direct influence over what board members do, and if they continue to perform as they did in 1980, this year would be a good time to begin dismissing those unresponsive and rubber stamping members of the board. We certainly couldn't be any worse off than we are now.

Improving A Life Raft

By DR. NATHAN WRIGHT

The longstanding social and political circumstances of black Americans in terms of the dynamics of power have been likened to those of people who have been forced to live on a life raft. Black Americans have been said to be moored on a life raft somewhat removed from the nation's shore and in the midst of dark-infested waters.

The ultimate goal has been to get onto the shore and into the business of creating a productive and rewarding life on shore. Yet we are said to have been largely content to live as best we can on what is like a wall-to-wall carpeted life raft completely equipped -- of late -- with the finest of fancy plumbing.

In this caricatured but clearly pointed sense, black leadership today is being challenged to move beyond improving or gilding the life raft state of things, regardless of how attractive or immediately satisfying our inherited situation of survival may seem to be.

Perhaps more importantly, however, the move from the life raft must not be seen as diminishing in any way an appreciative regard for those who have helped to sustain us as a race thus far. Indeed, we may still need the tangentially helping and supplemental hand of long established friendships in moving through the precarious waters which take us onto shore. But the movement onto shore must be our own basic racial leadership's opportunity to build its own strength. Black leadership for us as blacks specifically must build up its own muscles in order to be the more nearly equipped to give guidance to our own course and to exercise primary management roles in our own racial affairs, once we have fully landed on the mainland's shore.

DOWN THE BIG ROAD

By WILLIAM D. WALKER

We Are Not No. 1

The Washington Newsletter put out by an Italian organization, boasted of the fact that the new Congress that convened last week, contained 34 Italians. Six new Italians were elected last November. Four of the delegation are U.S. Senators.

Another tabulation shows that there are 26 Jews in the new House of Representatives and 6 in the U.S. Senate.

Interesting though, is the fact that in both the Italian and Jewish groups in Congress, there are Republicans and Democrats. One Italian, Senator Pete V. Domenici (R-NM) will be chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The Jewish population in the United States is estimated at 5,800,000. The largest concentration being in lower New York, with the borough of New York being the hub.

In contrast to the number of Italians and Jews in the new Congress, the number of Negroes is 18, and all are in the House of Representatives. The 1970 Census population of Negroes, was 22,580,000.

Two new black Congressmen were elected in 1980, one from Chicago, and one from Los Angeles. There has been only one black U.S. Senator in this century. He was Edward Brooke who was elected in 1964 from Massachusetts. He served two terms.

On the basis of population, Negroes are far under represented in Congress. This is largely because blacks do not register, and, of those who do register, just a little more than half of them vote in any given election. Then, when we do vote, we do not solidly support black candidates.

A good case in point was the 4th District Congressional contest involving the district including Jackson, Miss. A black college professor ran as an independent, forty-three percent of the district is black. If he had received the solid support of the black voters, he could have won. As it turned out, in the 3-way race, a Republican with a questionable reputation won.

In the 10th District of New Jersey, the black population is 51.8 percent. Yet, this district is represented by a white. The 21st District of New York has 42.1 per cent black; the 5th District of Georgia, formerly represented by Andrew Young now has a white Congressman. The 14th District of New York has a black population of 46.4% but no black Congressman.

The 2nd District of Mississippi has 46% black; the 3rd District has 40% black. The 1st District of Pennsylvania is 39% black. The 2nd District of North Carolina is 40% black. There are a number of Congressional Districts where the black population is from 30% to 39%. The black vote in these Districts could be the deciding factor, and it is possible that a black could be elected in some of these districts.

Despite the fact that the black population is one of the largest of the minority groups, we still have one of the lowest percentage of elected officials. This low figure is largely due to the failure of our people to register and vote intelligently.

For this reason, we are not number one. And, we will not be number one until we realize the importance of voting and recognize the relation of politics to civil rights.

THE CHANGING OF THE GUARD

January 20 marks the day America changes Administrations; the White House gets a new occupant and the nation new leadership. It is also an appropriate time to assess President Carter's four years of leadership.

That leadership was judged and found wanting by the electorate last November, but I have a feeling that history will judge the Carter Administration more favorably than did its contemporaries.

Burdened by the pressing problems of the day, people tend to blame the Administration in power. Separated from those day-to-day problems by the distance lent by time, we tend to see the broad outlines of policies better. By and large, the Carter Administration accomplished much. It presided over four years of peace, in itself an accomplishment in this troubled world. In the Middle East, it helped Israel and Egypt to bury their long enmity.

However imperfectly implemented, its human rights policies saved countless lives and brought a measure of morality to the international scene.

And the Carter team can be especially proud of its success in improving America's relations with the Third World, and especially with the closer ties with mineral-rich Black Africa. A major accomplishment was helping to bring independence and majority rule to Zimbabwe.

The domestic situation was plagued by inflation and unemployment. The President took the orthodox route to deal with inflation -- slowing down the economy and taking a recession that is still with us.

That was a mistake, politically and economically. It probably cost Mr. Carter re-election, while leaving inflation essentially unchanged and millions out of work.

But even here, President Carter governed with a compassionate concern for the economy's victims. He greatly expanded public service jobs and fought for urban aid, food stamps, and other measures that would relieve the economy's impact on the poor.

On civil rights, Mr. Carter will go down in history as a leader who cared, a man who demonstrated in his public and his private life that he believes in racial equality and in the government's duty to defend the rights of minorities.

One of his last acts in office was a courageous veto of a money bill that contained an anti-busing amendment. He fought for putting teeth in the fair housing law and presided over the most effective and activist federal equal employment opportunity enforcement program in history.

His appointments mirrored his belief that blacks and other minorities should have a prominent place in the ranks of government. Blacks were in key policy-making positions, including the Cabinet. President Carter appointed more blacks to federal judgeships than any other president.

This concern and evident identification with black people led blacks to give him the overwhelming majority of their votes last November, despite the widespread unemployment in the black community.

Our new President, Ronald Reagan, does not have that kind of black support; indeed his every move is being scrutinized for signs that he will be as repressive and anti-black as his detractors claim he will. Aware of black mistrust, Mr. Reagan has tried to reassure blacks he will be a fair President of all of the people.

He has the opportunity to go beyond that on Inauguration Day. The Inaugural Address offers the occasion to enunciate the principles of a new Administration.

Thus, I propose that on January 20, a major thrust of that address be the need for racial reconciliation, racial justice, and racial progress.

We once had a President who stood in the well of the Congress and declared: "We shall overcome." America needs that kind of commitment again. People need to hear the new President pledge aggressive enforcement of the civil rights laws, protection of the interests of the poor, and devotion to the black thirst for full equality.

America needs to hear its new President pledge to mobilize the vast powers of his office and his government to achieve the principles of justice to long denied to so many.

A Time For Political Reassessment

EDDIE WILLIAMS
Joint Center For Political Studies

As the political debris settles and we prepare to face a somewhat uncertain future, two things must be clear in our minds: we can neither be oblivious to the portents of the November 4 elections, nor can we afford to falter in our continuing struggle for liberty and justice for all.

The election results tell us a number of things. For the vast majority of black voters, the other side won. There is growing conservatism in the land. Some influential conservatives, unfortunately, are right-wing zealots. Federal influence is likely to diminish in the distribution of public benefits and in assuring civil rights.

The political post-mortems are still in progress. However, Governor Reagan's landslide victory appears to suggest that the voters wanted him to do several things: improve the economy, increase the nation's military power, and improve America's image in the eyes of the rest of the world. Perhaps in these areas, Mr. Reagan did receive a mandate.

In these broad terms, this is a mandate with which black Americans agree. Therefore, over the next four years, blacks must insist on playing a vital role in defining this mandate and in charting the course to economic revitalization, national security, and international prestige. We must do this, not only to protect the national interest, but to protect our own interests. Rather than this being a time for despair and withdrawal, it is a time for activism.

To be effective in a conservative political environment, we must readjust some of our perspectives. In the White House and in the Senate new people will soon be in charge, and they purport to have new ideas and different ways of doing things. Humphrey-Hawkins is out and Kemp-Roth is in as a legislative remedy for joblessness and declining productivity. In many instances the challenge ahead will be to bend conservative initiatives to our interests rather than trying to supplant them with Democratic-liberal shibboleths of the past. Where the goals of Republicans and blacks converge, there ought to be room for give and take, on both sides, on the means of achieving shared goals. Where the goals are different we must as in the past, chart our own course.

Beyond legislation and public policy, there should be other opportunities for blacks to increase their influence in the political arena. We must insist upon playing a major role in the restructuring of the crumbling Democratic Party. If we are to take the President-elect at his word, there also should be greater opportunities for involvement in the Republican Party. On January 15, 1977, following Gerald

Ford's defeat, Mr. Reagan said:

"The time has come for the Republicans to say to black voters: 'Look, we offer principles that black Americans can, and do, support. We believe in jobs, real jobs; we believe in education that is really education; we believe in treating all Americans as individuals and not as individuals and not as stereotypes.'"

On the same occasion Mr. Reagan said that those who are attached to the GOP should "have a say in what goes on in the Party."

This could be a reassuring note for blacks who, on the whole, have been troubled by some of the espousals and adherents of the Republican Party. President Reagan could work to change all that. He must realize, however, that his pledge to abolish some federal programs and to transfer others to states and localities strikes fear in the hearts of minorities and the poor.

The ensuing fight over program demolition and policy change will turn, hopefully, on the merits in specific cases. But if the state and local level is where the conservatives insist the action will be, then so be it. That's where we must be as registered voters, elected and appointed officials, citizen lobbyists, moral persuaders, and as public opinion molders.

Even before the conservative sweep in the November 4 elections, it was clear that the time had come for us to reassess the nature and extent of our participation in the political system, not only in terms of the two major parties, but also in terms of how we organize and develop strategies to increase our influence. No doubt this process will now be accelerated.

Law and Social Justice A Tool for Civil Rights

By ALEXANDER E. JONES

The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), which allows citizens access to government files, is one of the most important laws passed in American history. It has enabled us to find out about abuses ranging from the FBI's covert and malicious attempts to discredit Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. to the CIA's mind control experiments conducted on unwitting subjects, to the Army's open air germ warfare tests conducted in major American cities.

In short, the FOIA has been an effective tool in exposing a host of violations of civil and Constitutional rights. Based on documents released under the law, numerous suits have been filed against such agencies as the Army, the CIA, and the FBI. This law has been the "lingua sword" of those who still believe that our government is here to serve and protect us, not to destroy our freedom or endanger our lives.

Unfortunately, there are now some rumblings to do away with the Freedom of Information Act, or at least to weaken it so it can no longer be used to expose abuses of the CIA and FBI. When the Reagan Administration takes over in January of 1981, we are told to expect a strong push in that direction. A push, which if successful, will become one of the major tragedies of the 1980's.

If the CIA and FBI were trustworthy, it would be a different story. But after years of wearing phony masks of patriotism and goodness in public, while at the same time destroying the lives and careers of innocent Americans, can these agencies be trusted? Decidedly no.

Certainly there are many good people in the FBI and CIA. However, as agencies, they have done terrible things which have seriously endangered our civil and constitutional rights.

The wise and perceptive men who founded this country realized from the start that the key to maintaining liberty lays in the ability of the people to keep track of what their government is doing. The Freedom of Information Act is one of the most effective laws in allowing us to do just that.

To weaken it, to destroy its effectiveness, would be a tragic mistake.

Caring For Loved Ones

Once in a while one runs across a philosophy of the noblest and that was the quality of discussion this writer had with Mrs. Minnie Cleveland recently. She was telling of the condition of her mother who lives with her because of an eye condition, but the stay is limited to the full recovery period of her mother who will go back to her own apartment.

Mrs. Cleveland explained that her mother has a great fondness for her old apartment and looks forward to returning to it. Because of that, Mrs. Cleveland retains the apartment to which her mother can return when well. The aim is diametrically opposite to so many others who abide time until death removes the mother.

Not Mrs. Cleveland. She said that she wanted her mother to enjoy life when alive and that the available apartment gives her hope and something to look forward to. That is the belief of that gracious lady, Minnie Cleveland, we all met at the checkout counter of a Kroger store.

The aim of the lady is so spiritually rich. She knows her mother enjoys living by herself in her own apartment and has something out there to return to rather than the hand of the grim reaper.

Somewhere in a song sung by Bill Henry of the Ink Spots, there is a line, "Everybody busy running around." That is so typical of our world—everyone is busy with personal matters that he allows himself little time to think of others in the way Mrs. Cleveland thinks of her mother. She goes beyond the "looking out for" over to providing an inspiration for her parent, inspiring the mother to recover and return to her own home.

Throughout the city there are big hearted people and institutions. One can see many pedestrians walking away from church buildings carrying food bags without which many humans without jobs, without homes, without family or friend connection would go without food.

Some place on Long St., just east of Fourth St., there is the proverbial rescue mission where one might get a meal, a sermon and a sleeping cart for a very small amount, about $1 a night. There is a constant big stir over the welfare of the oldsters, a more dignified term, senior citizens, and so much philanthropy seems a heavenly blessing.

But there is something more golden about Mrs. Cleveland's act, for it is complete, deep-seated, filial piety, not that she worships the mother but loves the mother to facilitating in the maternal happiness and comfort. All those other projects are performed by a salaried staff.

Filial piety has been a cornerstone of far Eastern faiths and has been as exacting as the commandment "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

self" in the Christian faith. One has to recall that his only real contact with the Far East has been through the movies, but that he always heard the dialogues, pertaining to the parents, invariably carrying the phrase "honorable father or mother" and that is the way the Chinese, Japanese and other people east of Europe felt about it.

How it developed that way lies in tombs of antiquity, perhaps the devotion stemmed from the transmigration of souls ideas of so much of the faith of Asia. Some of the people of our times practice respect and do felicitate in association with their parents. Sometimes they do the right thing by them to keep the neighbors from talking and others just dig in through a pattern of sincere love.

The late senior citizen splurge has put new meaning and importance on the older generation, the passing generation. Old folks can be interesting and entertaining for nice company if given an ear. Much too often they are considered behind times but can be kept up to date if allowed more latitude while being seen but seldom heard.

Mrs. Cleveland's mother is a precious family member to be seen and heard a long time into the future. Every hope flows in that direction. Now one thinks of flower sprays and dirges but of the time when the mother can walk back to her apartment sans cataclysm, sans aging miseries in the happy spirit of looking towards a brighter future.

There is a twilight for us all, but there may be a happy lingering in the glow of the setting sun to which every being aspires. That is the staging Mrs. Cleveland plans for someone so precious to her, her mother. When nature's ailments subside, the mother will be returning to the apartment so comforting to her, her home.

Commissioner Brown Named To National Com.

Cuyahoga County Commissioner Virgil E. Brown has been named to the Employment Policy Steering Committee of the National Association of Counties (NACo). "I'm sure the fine employment programs implemented here in Cuyahoga County were a determining factor in this appointment," Commissioner Brown stated. "I plan to be very active in my involvement with this committee and am very grateful that NACo has shown this confidence in me."

NACo's 12 steering committees form the policy-making arm of county governments nationally. The committees' recommendations on county legislative goals are presented to county officials from across the nation at NACo's annual conference.

OUR READERS OPINION

The One Cent Rip-Off

Dear Editor:

This article is written and dedicated to the unsuspecting Consumers who have been ripped off by those self-service gas stations.

I have spent the last week, buying gas at different service stations, around the city of Cleveland, to see if what I suspected was true and unfortunately it was.

I have found that, at a large number of these stations, some of the gas pumps are off by as much as two cents. (Example—you pre-pay the attendant $5.00 dollars, when you pump your gas the pump will stop at $4.98 or $4.99) and if you multiply these few pennies, times the number of automobiles that frequent these stations, you will see very clearly the amount of the rip-off that comes out of the public's pocket.

Unfortunate Picketing

Dear Editor:

For the past eight (8) years, I have served as a member of the Murtis H. Taylor Board of Trustees, and in addition was Vice President for two (2) years. I, like other board members, am shocked and appalled over the fact that employees of our center have no more sensitivity to our community than they have shown during negotiations held over the last six (6) months. Their claim for more money than the Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) across the board raise offered them by our board is totally outrageous in light of the actual facts of our financial situation as outlined in our Press Release of December 17, 1980.

Even more incredibly is the spectacle of a group

If this has happened to you, and you have not spoken out about it then you should start now, there is nothing wrong with returning to the attendant and asking for the few pennies that you have been shorted, it might seem like a very small amount to you, but when added up at the end of the year, the profit that the Oil Companies will reap is staggering.

The public is paying through the nose as it is, why should the consumer bear the burden of this rip-off too.

Remember if this happens to you, be sure to ask the gas station attendant to refund the few pennies that you have been shorted, if they refuse then report that station to your nearest Consumers Affairs Office, if the Oil Companies see that the public will no longer tolerate this kind of rip-off then they will see to it that their gas pumps are correct and honest.

WRITE IN REVIEW:

"Amadeus" is a Latin word and when simply translated it means "God Loves." It is also currently the name of a Broadway play which I loved and enjoyed at the Broadhurst Theatre. Superb acting is its high point which is strengthened by a prose like attack upon the English language by a master craftsman, Ian McKellen. He is effectively paced by the exquisite stage maturity of Tim Curry in the name role of Wolfgang "Amadeus" Mozart. The interesting contrast is that Tim's thespian career was kicked off by a role in the London production of "Hair." By many write hands McKellen has been knighted as the finest classical actor of his generation. I am in complete accord with that critical appraisal. On his return to the illuminated lane he sets the tone for those about him, Jane Seymour, Nicholas Kepros, Caris Coffman, Patrick Hines and the other cast members to make "Amadeus" genuinely engrossing and a delightful theatrical experience. It affords a marvelous opportunity for playwright Peter Shaffer to continue his award winning ways.

Black Empowerment

By Dr. Nathaniel Wright, Jr.
HUMAN RIGHTS ACTIVIST

Black Job Needs Require Special Consideration

Regardless of how any current "full employment" measures by the Congress or by presidential executive order may be administered, it should be clear by now to all that any "simple employment remedy" will not get at the underlying problems of black adult or black youth unemployment.

The essential problem is not one of "jobs." It is a racial problem, with roots deeply embedded in the historical fabric and experience of our nation's life. Unless black unemployment—which has been well into the Great Depression levels for several years now—is dealt with in terms other than as private or public sector economics, the problems will remain and will almost certainly continue to.

In the end, with our present mis-definitions of the unemployment issue facing black Americans, we shall be faced with no less than continuing frustration and—who knows?—perhaps even a national conflagration.

When "summer jobs" were made available because of the fear of black rebellions in the 1960s, to whom did the jobs go? Heading the lists were the sons and daughters of members of the Congress. Were the federally-sponsored "summer cooling off jobs" meant for them? You better bet they were not.

"Job opportunities," no more than "more public welfare," do not constitute an appropriate answer to "a highly specialized need" in our nation's life.

If jobs are to be created in order to reduce specifically black unemployment, then legislation—and the accompanying administrative provisions—must be aimed at that specific purpose.

The essential problem here is the same one which brought forth the Bakke graduate school admissions case. Blacks have never been considered to be a full part of the nation's life.

This is not to condemn or label or to blame anyone. It is to recognize and to accept the inescapable facts of our nation's, inherited mind-set and the ways of doing things.

There is no evidence that the mores (pronounced like "more-see"), or traditional ways of looking at racial realities, have undergone any sudden or radical change.

Let us not forget that it was just about 25 years ago—in 1954—that by a Supreme Court decree blacks began to be seen possibly as full "citizens." In our colleges and universities, some estimates are that probably 90 percent of our nation's holders of Ph.D. degrees still have feelings that blacks are, in some ways, inferior.

In an altogether defensive manner, blacks fail to "bargain into" the backroom and other social and political arrangements which would end their "racial isolation."

BERTRAM GARDNER officially retired as Vice President of Urban Affairs at AmeriTrust on December 31, 1980. This does not mean, however, that he will be idle. He will continue his outstanding community work which has gained him many awards and much recognition. Plans are also in the making for the opening of his consulting firm in about two months.

Shown is Mr. Gardner during three phases of this Call and Post interview. On February 7, he will be awarded once again as the Black Professional-of-the-Year 1981 by the Black Professionals Association and the Friends of Bert Gardner. (Photos by Ronnie Clark)

Bertram Gardner Retires As Vice President Of AmeriTrust

By MARY LYNN

CLEVELAND -- According to Webster's New World Dictionary, the word retire is defined: "to withdraw to a secluded place; to go to bed; to retreat as in battle; to give up one's work, business, etc., and to withdraw from use."

None of those definitions fit Bertram Gardner who completed his last day of work as Vice President of Urban Affairs at AmeriTrust Bank on December 31, 1980.

In a recent Call and Post interview, Mr. Gardner talked about his life -- past, present and future plans. He touched upon certain areas that have been instrumental in his life of total community involvement.

Gardner moved to Cleveland from Indianapolis, Indiana, in 1952. With him he brought an A.B. Degree in Sociology, a M.A. Degree in Psychology from Butler University in Indianapolis; an Honorable Discharge from the U.S. Army and a Bronze Star.

Also tucked under his belt was leadership ability, sincerity, and the ambition to help the Greater Cleveland community at large.

Prior to his employment at AmeriTrust, Gardner was YMCA Director from 1946 until 1966 (both in Indianapolis and Cleveland); executive director of the Community Relations Board, City of Cleveland; and cabinet member of Mayors Locher and Stokes from 1966 through 1969.

He became employed as manager of the Organizational Development for the Cleveland Trust Company (later changed to AmeriTrust) in 1970 and in 1972 developed the Urban Affairs Department of which he was elected vice president.

The function of this department was to help the community understand banking - its procedures, services and use.

Gardner described among his most rewarding experiences the witnessing of AmeriTrust to become totally involved with the community and more helpful in financing.

Through Urban Affairs the bank identified with the schools and Gardner is particularly fond of the bank's role in educating as well as dealing with the political and religious groups throughout the city.

Another rewarding experience in Gardner's career at AmeriTrust was when he founded the Consumer Education Advisory Committee of the Cleveland Public School System.

This committee was prompted through the lack of students being taught banking and finance as part of the regular curriculum.

Today, students grades kindergarten through 12 benefit and have learned the importance of finance and its effective use through efforts of the Advisory Committee. Another highlight of Gardner's banking career was when he formed the Blacks in Management (BIM) which is geared to directing corporate attention and finances to organizations and programs in the black community.

As part of the program, teachers of finance and related courses from across the country are placed in corporate positions to gain working experience and greater depth in the subject matter they are teaching.

This better enables them to perform. The "on the job training" lasts the summer months when regular school is in recess.

Still another aspect of the illustrious banking career of Gardner which enables him to help others is, his co-founding the Urban Bankers' Coalition of Cleveland.

This, he explained, is the first organization of black bankers in the city. They pool their knowledge in banking and finance and have developed a Speaker's Bureau that educates groups such as senior citizens, churches, schools, and other organizations.

Through all of his affiliations, Gardner stresses the need for blacks to share information and experiences they have gained with one another.

Bertram Gardner has received many awards and much recognition for his community contributions. Among them is an award from the Glenville Area Community Council for Outstanding Service to the Community; was selected "District Man-of-the-Year" by Omega Psi Phi Fraternity; awarded as Top Public Administrator by the American Society of Public Administrators; received the Interracial Award-of-the-Year from the Downtown Kiwanis; was awarded the Meritorious Service Award from the Cleveland Business League and the Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Black Accountants.

Among other awards was the Citizen-of-the-Year Award from the Cleveland Area Real Estate Board and the Past Presidents Award for Community Service from the Urban League.

Those are but a few of the many awards he has received through the years. He also holds memberships on numerous boards throughout the community.

With all of Bertram Gardner's business and community involvements and the numerous organizations in which he is involved, retirement seems remote.

He loves work and explained that he will remain active in all of his affiliations.

Of special interest is the fact that Mr. Gardner said he cannot recall a day in his life when he did not want to go to work. Future plans are already underway for his next business venture which will be the opening of a consulting firm. He will be open for business in two months.

On February 7, Bertram Gardner will receive yet another award. He has been selected as Black Professional-of-the-Year 1981 by the Black Professionals Association.

He will be honored at a special program hosted by the Association and Friends of Bert Gardner.

This will add to the long list of acknowledgments he has received for a lifetime of outstanding humanitarian work.

Highlights Of Gardner's Years As Director Of Community Relations Board For City Of Cleveland

By MARY LYNN

One of the most involved positions in the career of Bertram Gardner was that of Director of the Community Relations Board, City of Cleveland. He was appointed in 1966 by Mayor Ralph Locher who knew of Gardner's contacts and effectiveness in both the black and white communities.

Prior to 1966, the position was not a cabinet post and the director was not on an even level with directors of other city departments.

Gardner discussed the necessity of elevating the position and Mayor Locher agreed and made the post a cabinet appointment.

Among the many duties of the Community Relations Board was investigating all allegations of job discrimination within the city and those with whom the city dealt; investigating allegations of housing bias, and maintaining a level of peace and cooperation within the city.

Soon after Gardner became director, the Hough riots commenced. The Community Relations Board was directly responsible to investigate the causes of the unrest, find out who was involved and why, and to restore peace.

Gardner and his staff were the only city employees who actually patrolled the streets because they could negotiate and talk with community people who would not communicate with the administration. Gardner was well known in the community because he had worked with the youths and gained the respect of the residents.

The community cited many reasons for the riot including unemployment, high utility rates, police brutality and prejudice. various kinds of other discrimination -- to name a few.

Gardner and the Community Relations Board had to deal head on with the allegations and find a workable solution.

His years of dedicated service to the people of Cleveland as director of the YMCA gained him trust from the community and most important community people listened to what he had to say.

He organized street elements which helped to control looting and criminal activity associated with the riot, and formulated "Discussions in Black" monthly meetings between city leaders and black individuals and organizations in an attempt to attain better understanding.

Also developed were Police Community Relations Councils in each police district which held monthly meetings.

The meetings were attended by Gardner, the Board and high ranking police officers. Discussed was the police department and problems of the Community in an attempt to foster a better police-community relationship.

Through the direct efforts of Bertram Gardner, the riot came to a halt. Gardner cited the end of the riot as a most rewarding experience.

Other areas in which he and his Board were vital was the combatting of discrimination against blacks by the unions.

This plan of action was started by former Community Relations Director Ellsworth Harpole, but was put into action by Gardner.

Prior to this, blacks had a hard time getting into (or were not admitted) to unions such as electrical, plaster, plumbers and heavy equipment; and were not included in apprenticeship programs.

Gardner and the Board opened the doors to union membership and apprenticeship programs and training was established. Apprenticeship offices were organized enabling unions to work with blacks.

Also set up was the Apprenticeship Council which consisted of representatives of the Community Relations Board, unions and blacks.

Through this, programs benefitting blacks were established. Gardner brought about the contract Compliance Program for the City of Cleveland which provided the opportunity for blacks to qualify for city contracts.

It specified that anyone bidding on contracts for the city had to demonstrate equal employment in regard to minorities.

This resulted in the largest number of jobs for blacks with contractors and firms who had, until that time, excluded blacks.

Gardner also opened the doors for more blacks to gain employment in the Federal Building.

When the 1968 Glenville riots occurred Gardner and the Board worked again using carefully planned strategy to bring the riot to an end.

In the short time Gardner was director of the Community Relations Board from 1966 to 1970 he accomplished for the city what was once felt impossible.

He never allowed politics to enter his position as Director. He insisted and Mayor Locher agreed that he would not be obligated along political lines.

Gardner said that in keeping peace in the city, the Board could not afford to be biased politically, but must remain independent.

HUD Seeks Minority Business Involvement

A government public forum to encourage and increase participation of minority enterprises in housing programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will be held Feb. 8, in the lobby hearing room in the State Office Tower, 30 E. Broad St.

The one-day session will be geared to assisting minority contractors involved with HUD contracts, bid packaging, labor relations and bonding procedures.

The forum follows a recent HUD announcement of a special demonstration program designed to help minority developers obtain greater access to HUD's housing programs, particularly assisted, multifamily housing for low and moderate-income persons. Stated to speak at the forum will be the State Representative C.J. McClintock of Dayton and Thomas O. Jenkins, director of Management and Field Coordination for HUD's Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity in Washington, D.C.

For further information, contact Nona Dawson, forum coordinator, 469-5272, or Geneva Scott, FH&EO director, 469-6994, HUD Area Office, 200 N. High St.

University Hospitals Add New Hours For Patients

To accommodate better the schedules of working women, the Ohio State University Hospitals obstetrics and gynecology clinic began accepting evening appointments Jan. 14.

Gynecology patients will be able to visit the clinic by appointment until 7 p.m. each Wednesday, as well as during regular clinic hours, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"For the patient, the new evening hours are very convenient," said Dr. Frederick Zuppan, chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology. "Working women don't like to take time off work to go to the gynecologist for routine checkups," he said.

Harambee School Students Perform For The Elderly

Preschoolers brought cheer to several area senior centers over the recent holiday. As part of the Harambee Community Outreach Program, visits were made to the Isabelle Ridgway Home, which the Columbus Senior Activities Center and the Columbus Day Care Center For the Elderly to sing and spread seasonal greetings.

The Harambee Community Outreach Program was funded by a grant from the Greater Columbus Arts Council in October 1980 and with those funds the project intends to bring entertainment to those who can't get out to enjoy the city's public events.

The students, ages three through six, present many of the songs they have learned from teacher Joyce Mitchell. Arnett Howard, the project director, illustrates many of the photos that he is collecting on the performance for an entertainment biography with stories and music.

SWAHILI TAUGHT AT EAST New Language Class Educates Students On African Culture

The teaching of the Swahili language to students at East High School offers an education on the people and culture of a large part of Africa as well as future job opportunities, says the instructor of the class.

Umbisa Gusa of the Black Studies Department of Ohio State University said Swahili is a national language in Africa and is used extensively throughout the huge continent. "If you want to know about people, you study their language first," said Gusa, who has taught the language for two years at Ohio State. "It is a reflection of their culture. All communications are done through language. A language is a culture."

Because Africa is becoming increasingly important to American companies, their business expansion will necessitate having workers who are versed on the language that is used frequently by Africans, he said.

How the language is used will be the focus of the new class at East High, he said, adding that 24 students are enrolled for an hour of study each Friday for the remainder of the school year. He said student response to the class has been quite good.

Gusa, who is from Kenya, said Dr. William Nelson, chairman of the Black Studies Department at Ohio State, and Douglas Smith, who teaches black studies at East, arranged the class as a pilot project to bring the general community close to the university.

"The university is not a tower. It is part of the community," Gusa said, adding that the Black Studies Department wants to allow greater participation from the community in its programs. He said if community response to the class is favorable, it may be expanded.

Because Americans have generally been unresponsive to learning foreign languages, it has created a situation where the United States is "isolated" in terms of language and other peoples' cultures, Gusa said. Learning other peoples' languages can create an appreciation for different life styles in a world that is becoming less distant because of advancements in communications, he said.

In Africa and other parts of the world, he said, students routinely learn two or more foreign languages as part of their education. He said Swahili is spoken mainly in the eastern, central and parts of southern Africa. Next to Arabic, it is the most important language in Africa and is found at the national, academic and social levels, he said.

Gusa said the language

is broadcast in all major capitals of the world, including a daily Swahili program on the Voice of America in Washington, D.C. Major universities such as Ohio State are also teaching the language, he said.

Over 150 Attend Urban League Guild's Scholarship Luncheon

The Columbus Urban League Guild recently hosted a most successful and elegant Anna Stahl Scholarship Luncheon at Honka's Party House. The luncheon was the second in an annual tribute to the late Mrs. Stahl who was not only a devoted charter member of the Guild and the Urban League, but also an active member of the Columbus community and her church, Trinity Baptist.

The Rev. E.A. Parham, pastor of Trinity, delivered a moving tribute in memory of Mrs. Stahl to the more than 150 persons in attendance.

Equally impressive and informative presentations on the activities of the national and Columbus chapters of the Urban League Guild were given by Georgia Roundtree, regional director, and Juanita Barkstall, president of the Columbus Urban League Guild. The mistress of ceremonies was the always delightful Rosalind Beatty.

While guests dined on a sumptuous luncheon, they were entertained by the beautiful and dynamic voices of the Bernard Upshaw Singers. Also highlighting the afternoon activities were the engaging and attractive V.J. Images Models, who showcased the trend-setting designs of their own, Vera R.

Jordan. Among the many honored guests was Alexander J. Allen, vice president of the National Urban League's headquarters in New York City.

A proclamation was issued by Gloria Miller, Guild member, on behalf of Columbus Mayor Tom Moody, proclaiming the day Urban League Guild Day in honor of Anna Stahl.

Proceeds from the luncheon will go to the scholarship fund that is awarded annually to an area high school student planning to further their education.

LEAGUE SPEAKER-Alexander J. Allen, nephew of the late Nimrod Allen, founder of the Columbus Urban League, stands to address the Urban League Guild scholarship luncheon.

GUILD SPEAKER-Georgia Roundtree, regional director of the National Urban League Guild, was the guest speaker for the Columbus Guild's scholarship luncheon.

Nutrition A La Carte

Sugar is a significant source of calories in the American diet. It contributes in a very meaningful way to the satiety and the sensory values of food. In spite of the speculation regarding the negative contributions of sugar to health, there is no evidence to support the hypothesis that sugar contributes to the development of a number of diseases in man, with the exception of dental caries.

In fact, information obtained in a recent study demonstrates that snack foods, while providing a significant proportion of calories as sugar, also provide significant amounts of other nutrients.

Children from one to three years of age need more good foods in proportion to their size than older children. Since their stomachs can only hold so much, their total food intake will be less. Thus, the emphasis on real, body-building foods must be greater. What they eat must not crowd out the needed variety of foods that are high in protein, minerals, and vitamins.

Calories measure how much energy the food we eat will give us. Thus, a calorie is not, in itself, a nutrient. But since you require energy to think, breathe, digest, and move, you need specific amounts of calories for your age, sex, height, and weight. Nutrients include water, protein, carbohydrates, fat, minerals, and vitamins.

Single foods cannot be labeled good or bad. It is the total diet that is adequate or inadequate. Any food item can be incorporated into a sound diet and, by the same token, any food item can be abused. The selection of individual foods depends upon the personal preferences of the consumer.

The overall quality of the diet depends upon the consumer's knowledge of foods and ability to combine foods into a daily four-food-group diet pattern which meets nutrient needs.

While food-lad nostrums won't prevent or cure disease, good nutrition is still essential to overall health. The basics of sound nutrition aren't as complicated as people are sometimes led to believe. If anything, the trouble with good nutrition is that it's fairly straightforward and unexciting--not the stuff of which best-sellers are made.

The common recommendation to eat a variety of foods has a sound reason behind it. If you eat a varied and well-balanced diet, you're likely to get all of the nutrients you need and not too much of any one substance that might be detrimental. Admittedly, the heavy promotion of many highly processed, high-calorie, low-nutrient products in the supermarkets can get in the way of selecting a proper diet. So it takes some conscious effort to achieve one.

A useful guide is to follow the four-food-group concept to good eating and easy menu planning: milk, meat, fruit-vegetable, and grain.

Nutrition labeling is voluntary for most foods. Therefore, some food producers and marketers can omit it if they choose. But, if they add a nutrient to any food, or make a claim about nutritional values of a product, then labeling is mandatory.

Adults can improve their snacks as well as their nutrition. The typical morning coffee break is a case in point. For some people, it's not just a break, but their breakfast and a poor one at that. Coffee break snacks become nutritionally balanced if they include items such as cheese wedges, oranges, fruit and vegetable juices, milk, cottage cheese with fruit, or ready-to-eat cereals.

The soundest approach to weight control is prevention. Doctors know it's simply easier for people not to get fat in the first place than to lose weight after they've put on too many pounds. So watch your weight, and cut down immediately if your weight increases. Do enjoy your food, but eat only as much as you need for proper body maintenance and energy.

Although some vitamin D can be formed by the action of sunlight on the skin, the amount may be insufficient for human needs--especially in heavily pigmented skins. In geographic areas where sunlight is limited seasonally or where there is considerable atmospheric pollution, the amount of ultra-violet energy absorbed from the sun may be less than amounts needed for minimum daily requirements. Therefore, the importance of vitamin D fortification should not be overlooked.

Vitamin C is an essential nutrient. Its value in preventing a disease called scurvy is legendary. But more recently, some scientists have claimed that huge doses have the power to cure everything from the common cold to cancer and heart disease. This is just not true. To this date, there have been no rigidly controlled tests to document these claims.

If you're trying to shed a few pounds, don't forget that exercise is your best ally. Not only will you exercise your muscles, you will tone your body and increase your cardiovascular output.

Fun-Filling Sandwiches
Fall and winter activities call for a lot of getting together—especially on weekends—and entertaining can be made fun with hearty sandwiches filled with kraut. Kraut is low-calorie, highly nutritious and very delicious. It has only 24 calories per cup (undrained) is high in fiber and an excellent source of vitamin C, thiamine, riboflavin, calcium and iron. Try a Stack-the-Deck Krautwich on hearty pumpkin bread or a Kraut Long John on Italian bread.

It's Apple Time! Put out a dish of delicious eating apples for dessert and let everyone pick their own. Enjoy!

STACK-THE-DECK KRAUTWICH

(Makes 4 to 6 servings)
2 cups well-drained sauerkraut (about 16 ounces undrained weight)
3 tablespoons salad oil
1/2 cup shredded carrot
1/2 cup chopped sweet pickle
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 pound loaf pumpkin bread, about 8 inches long
3 tablespoons softened butter or margarine
Crisp romaine lettuce leaves
4 large thin tomato slices
1/2 pound sliced Swiss cheese
1/2 pound sliced turkey loaf
1/2 pound sliced corned beef
Several hours before serving, mix kraut, oil, carrot, pickle and seasonings in bowl; cover and chill.
Trim bottom crust from loaf of bread. Cut bread into 3 horizontal slices; spread cut surfaces lightly with butter. On bottom third of bread, layer half of the romaine, tomato slices, Swiss cheese, turkey loaf, corned beef and kraut mixture. Add second bread slice; layer remaining ingredients on bread. Cover with top of bread. Secure with skewers or large picks.

CARTER WINS!—This Jimmy Carter, at rear, however, is a standout among the Ophelia DeVore Alumni Associations making plans for their "Grand Reunion 81" with a weekend of glitter and glamour April 24-26, 1981. Johnson, Willie Mae Clark, Constance Dale, Jacqueline Wallington, Dee Simmons, Debbie Boone, Yvonne Curry, Judith Mack, Sandra McGinn, Sandra Pinckney, Joan Johnson, Eleanor Simms, Barbara Hunter and Mary-Elsie Verrett. The celebration will be held at the Sheraton Centre in New York City.

DeVore Beauty School Founder To Be Honored

"Grand Reunion 81," a glamour packed, fun-filled three-day weekend, will be observed April 24-26, 1981 to celebrate the founding of the Ophelia DeVore Beauty School, located at 1697 Broadway, New York City.

Founder Mrs. Ophelia DeVore will be saluted for 35 years of developing people for all walks of life, especially the modeling professions, when thousands of former students are expected to meet at the Sheraton Centre, formerly the Americana Hotel.

Co-hosts for the event are the Grace Dei Marco Models. All alumni and friends are cordially invited to join in the excitement of the weekend. Planned activities include: "Disco

Get-Togethers," "Award Banquets," "Then & Now Fashion and Beauty Shows," "Model, Personality and Beauty Contests," "Keep-In-Touch Learn & Fun Sessions" and much more.

Workshop On Financial Aid

Whetstone High School, 4405 Cenic Dr., will have a financial aid workshop for college-bound students and their parents from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 21, in the school's library.

Jim Cloggett, guidance counselor at the school, said parents are encouraged to attend the meeting which will provide information to parents on how to apply for financial aid for students who plan to enter college. For further information, call 267-6152.

EARLY BIRDS—Ophelia DeVore alumni Constance Dale, James Carter and Mildred Johnson hang notices on the Christmas tree marking the dates of Ophelia DeVore Associates "Grand Reunion 81"—April 24, 25, and 26, 1981. The weekend of glitter and glamour will honor company founder, Mrs. Ophelia DeVore, and will be held in mid-town Manhattan at the Sheraton Centre, formerly the Americana Hotel.

Tips Offered To Protect Water Meters In Winter

Each winter, the city's Division of Water repairs and replaces hundreds of frozen meters, with the customer paying the cost for any necessary repairs as stated in city code.

A frozen meter will cost the customer at least $15 and as much as $65 if the meter is damaged beyond repair, according to Jack A. Holt of the water division. He said the following steps can be taken to protect meters in the winter:

Check for sources of direct cold air around the meter, replacing broken or cracked windows; if the meter is under the kitchen sink where warm air cannot circulate, leave cabinet doors open to allow warm air to reach the meter; wrap meter base and pipes with heat tape, leaving the metal dial visible.

If further protection is required on nights of extreme temperatures, Holt said the following may be done:

Place a light bulb near the meter, or a space heater or heat lamp, making sure temperatures are not high enough to damage the meter parts and that no flammable materials are near the heat; run a small stream of water from a faucet throughout the night, and if a home is going to be unoccupied for a period of time during the winter months, have the water turned off.

If loss of water service occurs, call 222-8270.

Argumentative souls, short of facts, are very argumentative.

Most of the over-active civic workers know what they're doing.

Suspect In Rapes Faces 13 Charges

A 24-year-old woman reported that her home had been broken into and she had been raped. When police responded to the home, they found footprints leading from the residence. Police followed the steps to Ervin's home where he was found hiding in the basement. Also in the house was a monster mask. Police, an undetermined amount of cash and a BB gun that resembled a .45-caliber pistol.

Police said that the assailant entered the woman's home through an upstairs window. A ladder outside the house was used, they said, and after entering the house, the assailant held a gun on the woman's husband and then tied his hands with tape.

The suspect then took money from the man's coat pocket and tied the woman's hands with the tape. He then carried her downstairs where she was raped, police reported.

Ervin was charged with the robbery, burglary and rape, and later was charged with the rape of the same woman on Dec. 5 at her home. In addition, he was charged with the rape of a woman on Delbert Rd. on Nov. 7 and a woman on E.

24th Ave. on Dec. 19. In connection with the incident on Nov. 7, he was charged with one count of attempted rape.

The aggravated burglary and aggravated robbery charges are in connection with the rape charges, police said. The officers reported that the area had been under surveillance for some time because of the reported rapes in the area.

Police said Ervin has been under surveillance for two months because of his previous arrest record in connection with rape charges. He was sentenced to permanent commitment to the Ohio Youth Commission in 1979 after being convicted in juvenile court of delinquency counts of aggravated burglary, two rapes and aggravated robbery, according to police.

He was released from the Indian River juvenile detention center in August after undergoing psychiatric counseling, according to a Youth Commission spokesman. Ervin had served a year for conviction in the earlier crimes, the spokesman said.

OCSEA Appoints Three Regional Supervisors

The Ohio Civil Service Employees Association (OCSEA) recently appointed three regional supervisors to provide better service and representation for state workers.

Former field representatives Richard P. Ashley, Akron; David E. Johnson, Columbus; and Charles A. King, Cincinnati, will fill these new positions, said Arthur L. Evans, executive director of OCSEA.

"The move was made to promote efficiency within the staff," Evans said. "With these new levels of accountability, we will be kept better informed about the needs of our members and our future members."

Ashley, 33, an OCSEA staff representative for three years, will supervise Association activities in Northeastern Ohio.

Covering Central Ohio will be Johnson, 38, a two-year representative. King, 32, a six-year OCSEA veteran, will manage the Southwestern Ohio territory.

"All three men have outstanding proven abilities in the areas of negotiation, representation and arbitrations," said Don Franks, field staff supervisor.

he and his volunteer workers find many inmates dedicated to changing their lives but upon release return to adverse environments.

"Physically, we could not remove them from that environment," said Rubinow. "So we had to change the environment wherever possible."

"This ministry gears itself to working with all of those (parents, spouses and friends) prior to the inmates final release from the institution," he continued.

He said that local churches have helped make rehabilitation successful. "Without them doing much one-on-one with the family, we would be unable to physically reach all of these."

He explained that of the 700 members who have been baptized during the program's three years, 80 percent have not been involved in new crimes.

Rubinow said another service available is to have him come to speak to civic groups and youth groups in schools and churches. His address is Jail-Prison Outreach, Church of Christ, 2239 Kilbourne Ave., Col., OH, 43229.

Clodfelder Named Director of New Minority Business Agency

The passage of House Bill 584 made Ohio one of the few states nationwide to have a minority business development agency by statute.

The manager of the Minority Business Development Office (MBDO), Wiley Clodfelder, was recently appointed deputy director of the agency that is now within the Department of Economic and Community Development.

The new division will be responsible for implementing minority economic initiatives within the state as provided for by the state law.

The law provides a percentage of state expenditures for competitive bidding among minority enterprises. A minority business is defined as one that is owned and controlled by a minority.

Since 1976 Clodfelder has been manager of the MBDO. Prior to that he held the position of senior fiscal analyst and revenue sharing coordinator for the city of Columbus.

He also holds the rank of major in the U.S. Air Force Unit at Rickenbacker Air Force Base. He earned a B.A. and M.A. in city and regional planning from Ohio State University.

Residents On Eastside Invited To Meeting On Advancing Area

What began as a meeting of Mt. Vernon Ave. and Long St. business persons has now been expanded to include all interested members of the near Eastside community.

The meeting, to be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 27, at Refuge Baptist Church, is being called to develop unity in the community, according to Carl Wiley, owner of the Chesapeake Restaurant and one of the organizers.

"There is too much going on and being planned for this area by people who don't live, work or do business in the area. Those of us who have the most at stake are not being heard because we're acting as individuals instead of as a unit," Wiley told The Call & Post.

According to Wiley, "We had to expand the meeting because so many people are interested in coming. After all the homeowner has a lot at stake too. So does the professional."

...meeting participant

Included in the organizing group are William M. Potter, executive vice president of the Neighborhood Development Corp., Raleigh Randolph, owner of Randolph's periodical and sundry store, Jim Robinson of James T. Robinson Marketing Services, Mrs. Arthila Logan of Logan Beauty Salon, and Melvin Steward, owner of Plaza Carryout and president of the Mt. Vernon Plaza Merchants Association.

Mrs. Logan told The Call & Post, "We need to hear each other's concerns. Chances are many of our concerns are the same. If that is so, we can come together and seek solutions."

Randolph said, "We are not interested in meeting for meeting's sake. We want to find out how to get at some of our problems and take advantage of opportunities."

High on the list of the group's interests are an on and off ramp at Atcheson near Leonard for the proposed I-670. Also included, according to Wiley, is area crime and police protection, garbage collection and litter, drug abuse, Long St. and Mt. Vernon Ave. traffic patterns, and snow removal.

Potter of NDC said, "This could be one of the most exciting areas of the city someday. If we take the initiative and cause good things to happen."

HOUSE BILL 584 CITED Businessmen To Honor Ohio Governor And Legislature

(COLUMBUS BUREAU)

To honor Gov. James A. Rhodes and members of the 113th General Assembly for their passage of amended House Bill 584, the Minority Enterprise Trade Association of Ohio Inc. (META) and other minority business organizations are sponsoring a banquet.

The banquet will be Feb. 4 at the Aladdin Shrine Temple, 3850 Stetler Rd. in Columbus. The banquet will begin at 6 p.m. with a social hour.

House Bill 584 specifies that five percent of all state construction contracts and 15 percent of all contracts for state purchase of goods and services be let to black-owned firms and black consultants. The bill provides for alternative bonding and a low-interest loan program.

Benjamin Moore, president of META, said, "H.B. 584 is the most far-reaching piece of legislation of its kind in the country. All eyes will be on Ohio to see if it works over the next few years."

Moore added, "It is imperative that we (minority business people) let the governor and the legislature know how much we appreciate the bill and that we recognize its depth and importance to the minority business community."

The bill passed the House by a vote of 68-23, and the Senate by a 25-7 vote on Nov. 25. Rhodes signed the bill on Dec. 17.

Minority business persons from around the state are expected to attend the banquet. Keynote speaker at the event will be U.S. Rep. Parren J. Mitchell (D-Md.).

Mitchell is said to be known as "Mr. Minority Enterprise" on Capitol Hill. He will also be honored by

Darryl Hartsoe & Sons Air Force Promotion

Darryl R. Hartsoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Hartsoe of 1581 Hawthorne Park, has been promoted to the rank of airman first class in the U.S. Air Force.

ARREN MITCHELL

the business community as "Man of the Decade" for his demonstrated commitment to the improvement of minority enterprise in the United States.

A Mitchell amendment to President Carter's 1976 $4 billion public works bill alone resulted in more than $625 million in contracts to minority businesses. He also introduced a bill which became public law 95-507 in 1978, requiring prime contractors to spell out their goals for subcontracting to minority firms. This law potentially provides access to billions of dollars for the nation's minority businesses.

Tickets for the banquet are available by calling (614) 236-C911.

King To Be Remembered By Programs Around Columbus

Washington, D.C., on Thursday to support congressional legislation for making King's birthday a national holiday has been "enthusiastic and widespread."

According to Wander, response to the march has been good and local coordinators are working in more than 20 cities to arrange bus transportation for groups to come to Washington for the march.

Three Indicted On Homicide Charges

she was found by her father, police reported.

Meanwhile, Sgt. John Shawkey of the Homicide Bureau said that police are continuing to search for leads in the killing of Estella Lewis, 27, of 1766 Maynard Ave., on New Year's Day.

Shawkey said that police have "some leads that look good" but that police have no suspects. He said anyone with information that could lead to solving the case can contact police at 462-4730.

Ms. Lewis was found at the rear end of a club at 917 Mt. Vernon Ave. about 7:30 p.m. Jan. 1. A private citizen carried Ms. Lewis to St. Anthony Hospital where she died a few hours later, police said, from a bullet wound in her left side.

Shawkey said police are also continuing to investigate homicide cases that were not solved last year. He said, however, that getting information on some of the cases has been difficult. "Last year was really a unique year. We had more homicides last year than we didn't get any calls on than any recent years."

He said without help from community residents, it can prove difficult to make arrests in homicide cases.

Shamansky Staffer Promises Blacks To Be Appointed Soon

announced next week.

Among those named to his staff last week were press secretary Eric Rozenman, executive assistant Linda James, office manager, Karen Wakefield; constituent caseworker, Janet Huffman, government relations, Dennis Concilia, office director for Columbus, David Hetzler, and constituent caseworker, Jane Shicht Fleckner.

Rozenman stressed that the Congressman wants to keep in touch with his constituency in the twelfth district. "We want this to be the most accessible congressional office in the nation," he said.

Comer Remembered As Symbol Of Hope To Numerous Youth

STORY & PHOTOS
By NATHANIEL HOBBS

"He" is James Douglas Comer, and that is how Jack Gibbs, director of the Fort Hayes Career Center, remembered him.

Gibbs said he first met the man who was a symbol of hope to youth throughout Columbus at Beatty Recreation Center in 1945.

Gibbs' relation with Comer began the first day they met at the center in 1945 and continued until Comer's death at the age of 66 on Dec. 26, the result of an automobile accident. His funeral was last Wednesday at Shiloh Baptist Church with McNabb Funeral Home in charge.

Comer was program director at Beatty for many years. He organized and directed sports and activities for youth. Gibbs was one of those youth. So was Charlie James, who is with the Columbus Youth Bureau.

"During the '40s when I met Doug, many people lived in the (Pointexter) Village. Doug was sort of like the Pied Piper because all the kids in the Village would come to Beatty Center. That was before the new buildings, when it was an old two-story — brick outside and wood inside," James said.

"He never met a stranger. I think the positive things that he did for youth and kids will last a lot longer than any of us," James said. "He did not look for particular age groups. He worked with all youth."

And that is generally how the community knew Comer, as a conscientious, hard worker who believed the future rested with the young people, and that they would serve it well provided that they received the kind of guidance that prepared them well.

It was in 1937 that Comer moved to Columbus. Recipient of a B.S. degree in history and sociology at Ohio State University, he also received a master's degree from Kent State University. He became a member of Shiloh Baptist in 1940.

After leaving Beatty Center, Comer became program director at Neighborhood House and continued to work with youth from throughout the community. Before retiring in December 1979, he was a counselor with the Ohio Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Comer spent a considerable portion of his life writing and producing plays. Some of the plays were aired on local television and performed on stage. He also wrote several books.

"The thing that distinguished Doug Comer is that he took a caring approach in dealing with youth. A lot of people work for a paycheck. It was more than a paycheck with Doug," said James, who said he has been working with youth for 25 years as a result of Comer's influence upon him.

"In all those roles that he had during life, he was always the same," Gibbs remembered. "His warmth and interest in you as a person was the same. Doug Comer was the first leader that I met in 1945. He immediately took me under his wing as he did all the other people there at Beatty."

Gibbs said Comer's work and volunteer efforts seemed endless. "I don't think a man like Doug Comer ever retires. There is no way Doug Comer would retire from helping people."

Said Gibbs, "If you were rating Doug Comer on a scale of zero to ten, you would have to rate him a tenplus."

Comer is survived by his wife, Ruby D.; son and daughter-in-law, Charles Douglas and Linda Comer of Kalamazoo, Mich.; daughters and son-in-law, Barbara J. Clark of West Covina, Calif., and Beverly Ann and William Hargrow of Charleston, S.C.; and grandchildren Deborah and Dawn Clark, Gris and Cheryl Comers, James Douglas Hargrow.

He was a member of the board of directors of the Columbus Area Mental Health Center, the Beatty Center Tennis Club, Bluefield State College Alumni Association and Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

FINAL TRIP — The pallbearers for the funeral services of James Douglas Comer carry his body from Shiloh Baptist Church to the swelling journey to Kingswood Memorial Park.

Pallbearers were Deacons Alex Fields, William B. Watson, James P. Hunter, Samuel Allen, Arthur W. Barnette and Lawrence Hopkins.

GRIEVED FAMILY — The family of James Douglas Comer, with Mrs. Comer center, leaves Shiloh Baptist Church Wednesday following his funeral. With Mrs. Comer are Wilbur G. McNabb and Comer's son, Charles Douglas, in rear of McNabb.

faced, James Roseboro, who served on the council from 1971 to 1974 when he resigned and Hammond replaced him. However, Roseboro now works out of Washington with the National Center for Economic and Community Development.

No woman had surfaced Tuesday, Jones said. He said he talked with former city councilwoman Fran Ryan last December, and that Ms. Ryan told him that she has no interest in running for the city body upon returning from Chicago where she holds a federal job with the Department of Labor.

The screening process to name a candidate to replace Rosemond will begin Jan. 26, Jones said. He maintained that the Democrats could maintain control of the council.

"It's not a case of we can't win," he said, pointing out that the Republican Party elected three persons to council in 1979 despite having two Republicans who were already on council not seek re-election.

Jones said had Rosemond decided to seek re-election, the Democrats "would have had three incumbents running. The Republicans would have had a rough time beating them."

Jones would not say that reports on his resigning as party chairman this year are correct, but he said that his commitment was to stay on if Rosemond sought re-election.

Black Chamber Of Commerce Formed In City

But becoming a "do something" organization is the goal of the Chamber, said Rayfield to a breakfast meeting at Don-Nita's Restaurant at Mt. Vernon Plaza. About 400 persons were in attendance for the meeting.

Jalilah Haqq, president, said the first priority of the Chamber will be to increase membership and participation on the part of business persons and to lure some of the large black conventions to Columbus.

Asked how black conventions could increase the economic conditions of black businesses, Ms. Haqq said that such a successful campaign would serve to increase the Chamber's clout in having some of its goals met. She said the long range goal is to have black businesses which could accommodate large black conventions.

Curtis Jewell, vice president, said the new Chamber is needed because the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce has not paid attention or tried to improve the conditions of black businesses. "Blacks should identify some kind of organization to look out for the interests of blacks," he said.

"The Columbus Chamber is not sensitive to black needs. They are very paternalistic and express shallow concern and support. But whether you get the business or not, you often find the support just is not there."

During the meeting, State Rep. Otto Beatty explained that the new set aside legislation for minority businesses in Ohio should be able to help those businesses that are prepared to bid on contracts with the state.

Beatty stressed that the businesses should be ready to take advantage of the 15 percent of state contracts that will be bid on by only minority businesses.

In addition to holding monthly meetings, the Black Chamber also hopes to be chartered by the National Chamber of Commerce out of Washington, D.C., which the Columbus Chamber is a charter member of.

She said committees have been formed to deal with specific concerns of black businesses in Columbus. She said how many programs are adopted by the chamber will depend on the amount of participation from black business persons.

Currently there are black chambers of commerce in Dallas, Oakland and Miami.

INTRODUCTION

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development offers the following types of properties for sale to the highest bidder over the minimum price stated subject to the preferences noted below:

- 1. Repaired Properties
These properties have been repaired by HUD and brought up to local codes. They are offered with a one-year structural and systems warranty and are to be sold all cash, with a conventional or a VA mortgage, or with a mortgage insured Section 203b of the National Housing Act (NHA). Owner-occupants will be given preference and offers will be accepted on the basis of the best price.
- 2. As Is to be Repaired by the Buyer After Completion of Sale
These properties are listed for sale in an unrepaid condition without expressed or implied warranty. These properties may be purchased by either owner-occupants (persons intending to remain in the property subsequent to closing and repairs) or by non-occupants (persons intending to rent or sell following the closing and repair). Owner-occupant bids will be given preference over investors. It is the responsibility of the buyer to make any repairs needed in order to bring the property up to code. The properties must be purchased on an all-cash basis. It is the responsibility of the purchaser to obtain the financing necessary to close (this may include mortgages, loans, etc.)
- 3. Vacant Lots
These are sold all cash.
HUD properties are offered for sale to qualified purchasers, without regard to the prospective purchaser's race, color, religion, or national origin. Purchasers are instructed to contact the real estate broker of their choice. Offers to purchase may be submitted directly to the local HUD office when the purchaser cannot secure the services of a qualified broker.
Owner-Occupant Preference
Owner-occupant preference will be given only if the bid envelope is clearly marked "Owner-Occupant" and the occupancy certification on the HUD-9551 is completed. Bids which are not properly completed will be treated as investor bids.
Requirements for Selling Brokers
Any licensed real estate broker who has completed and returned the Joint HUD-VA Non-discrimination Certification may sell a HUD-Acquired property.

Shamansky Voices Approval Of Assignments

WASHINGTON — Ohio Congressman Bob Shamansky, D-Columbus, last Wednesday was named to two important Congressional committees.

House leaders appointed the freshman legislator to the Foreign Affairs and Science and Technology committees.

"Foreign Affairs is an important assignment for two reasons," Shamansky said. "No question affects each person in the 12th district more than that of war and peace, and the Foreign Affairs committee plays an important role in reviewing relations between the U.S. and both its allies and adversaries."

Shamansky said the committee is significant also because, "its international trade subcommittee deals with the status of American businesses abroad, and export trade has a bearing on the economy of central Ohio."

Shamansky's appointment to the Science and Technology committee carries an even stronger tie to the economics of Franklin, Delaware, and Morrow counties.

"I'm extremely pleased to be on this committee," the new congressman said. "America's business future will prosper or fail largely as a result of progress made in scientific and technical research."

"Central Ohio is among the research and technology leaders, with institutions such as Ohio State University, Battelle Memorial Institute, Chemical Abstracts, the Ohio College Library Center and others," Shamansky noted. He said policies the committee helps determine will influence the research climate -- and ultimately the rate of business growth -- in the district and the nation.

Shamansky also noted his own extensive private travel overseas will be helpful on his Foreign Affairs committee assignment, and recalled that John Vorys, a Republican who represented the district from 1938 to 1958, also served on the committee.

Mayors Council Plans Meeting

BIG BROTHERS TO BENEFIT Tournament Of Toughest Will Feature Tough Boxing Action

Tournament Of The Toughest, the highly controversial boxing contest which is being produced by Dr. Joseph Serian, nationally renowned optical consumer advocate and eye doctor, will take place Friday and Saturday at the Ohio State Fairgrounds Coliseum.

The contest, which will pit 32 amateur fighters against one another for a $5,000 first place cash prize, has gained widespread notoriety as a result of several license denials and legal actions involving the Columbus Boxing and Wrestling Commission.

A license has now been obtained and the tournament, originally scheduled for October of last year and re-scheduled for two different November dates, begins at 8 p.m. Friday.

In addition to the boxing competition itself, the show will include a "fight theme" dance performance by the six member Cream Tough Dance Review.

WOMEN BOXERS will be among the contestants vying for $1,000 in cash prizes in the women's eight-flight division of Tournament Of The Toughest on Friday and Saturday at the Ohio State Fairgrounds Coliseum. Fighters shown are from Philadelphia and New York.

Intermission entertainment will be provided by professional men's and women's boxing bouts as well as guest appearances by a number of professional boxing stars, including Floyd Patterson.

Serian said this is the largest, local, prize money boxing tournament of its kind ever to be held in central Ohio and is expected to attract national and international attention.

Co-op Optical Eyeland, a Columbus optical retailer, is sponsoring the event which will conclude at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Proceeds from the tournament will go to Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus.

Among the list of boxers scheduled to appear at the tournament are Jeff Jordan, who is untied and undefeated and hopes to compete for the heavy-weight title some day.

John L. Sullivan, winner of the 1979 Toughman Championship will also be on the card, along with Michael Bradley, the up and coming contender for

Benny Dallas To Be Honored Galloway Fails To Win Title

Beatty Center's 1949 Golden Gloves Championship Boxing Team will honor their long time boxing coach, Benny Dallas, at 6 p.m. Saturday at the Pointexter Tower, 1253 Mt. Vernon Ave. Dallas coached Beatty Center to its third consecutive team title in '49.

Coaches assisting Dallas were Wilbur Long, William Norwood, Charles James and Melvin Hawkins.

Winners on the '49 team were Tommy English, 118 pounds; Tony Johnson, 147 pounds and Eliga Cumberlander, 160 pounds. Other members of the team were Charles Leftwich, James Hunnicut, Ray Hart, James Drinks, Nick Turner, Cleo Lane and Arnold Penn.

All former boxers who trained under Coach Dallas are invited to attend this reception. For further information, contact Wilbur Long, 252-3518.

Manning Galloway, who waited for his shot at a boxing title, saw his efforts fall short last Thursday when he lost to U.S. Association junior welterweight champion Willie Rodriguez at the Ohio Center.

Rodriguez, of Allentown, Pa., won a unanimous decision over the Columbus opponent in their 12-rounder before about 700 people at Battelle Auditorium.

In other fights on the card, Michael Bradley of Columbus scored a technical knockout against Calvin Slaughter of Columbus in the fourth round. Darril Green of Columbus lost to Bobby Sparks of Portsmouth, Ohio in a split decision. Sam Gervin of Columbus fell in a technical knockout to Don King of Indianapolis.

In other bouts, Jeff Jordan of Columbus bested Donnie Townsend of Columbus with a technical knockout. Bennie Mitchell of Columbus lost a unanimous decision to Mark Frazier of Portsmouth; and Bo Moody of Columbus scored a TKO against Mark Schumacker of Zanesville.

Darrell Griffin is outscoring rookies in the National Basketball Association this year, averaging 21.4 points an outing for the Utah Jazz. Griffin, the second player picked in the draft, is on his way to being only the ninth rookie in the last 11 seasons to average 20 points per game.

Kelvin Ransey of Ohio State is among 11 rookies averaging in double figures. Ransey is averaging 10.9 with Portland, while Joe Barry Carroll, from Purdue, is averaging 15.6 with Golden State. He was the first player drafted last year.

Wes Mathews, who played at Minnesota, is averaging 12.8 points with Washington.

Fair Housing Co-Ordinator Pred Increase In Housing Discrimina

Due to the conservative mood of the country the "incidents for discrimination will probably increase," said Von Davis, the Fair Housing co-ordinator with the Columbus Urban League.

"A HUD (Housing and Urban Development) study of blacks seeking to buy property show two to two and a half million cases involving discrimination," he continued.

He said to combat discrimination on the basis of race, sex or a handicap in Columbus more people should consult the Urban League.

"People don't know for sure that they've been discriminated against so people aren't bringing problems to programs like ours," he explained. He said the program can get the problem rectified "either through conciliation or in court."

"The big thing is to call us and we'll try to work it out or refer you to whatever agency can help out," he stated.

He said the program, which has been in existence for four months, covers three basic areas including public awareness, discrimination redress and affirmative action. "We've been pretty successful in getting the word out on housing needs. We help low income or no income people looking for a place to stay," Davis stated.

He said majority of the cases they deal with involve landlord-tenant and eviction problems. "Those with no income or low income and those with large families usually have the most problems."

Those who violate the laws of handicapped persons often are not aware of it Davis said but education is part of the work of his program.

"We also educate landlords on section VIII. We help to dispel myths about those on Section VIII. We found greater acceptance of all of persons," he stated.

Hunger Task Force Board Adds Three

Shirley Rhodes, Berniece Troy and Janice White are among 11 new persons to join the 20-member board of trustees of the Hunger Task Force of Ohio, a nonprofit corporation organized in 1970 to raise the level of community awareness on problems of hunger in the state.

Ms. Rhodes is planning associate for the Ohio Citizens' Council for Health and Welfare. She has held that position since 1973. Prior to that, she worked for the Columbus Metropolitan Area Community Action Organization (CMACAO).

In addition, Ms. Rhodes serves on the boards of the Volunteer Action Center and the Paul Lawrence Dunbar Cultural Arts Center.

Mrs. Troy is president of the Ohio Baptist Women's Convention. She also is a member of the board of trustees of the Ohio Baptist Convention. She is a Sunday school teacher at Second Baptist Church where her husband, the Rev. Leon L. Troy, is pastor.

Ms. White, legislative counsel for the Ohio State Legal Services Association, is on the board of the Legal Aid Society of Columbus. She belongs to several bar associations including the National Conference of Black Lawyers.

All three will serve three-year terms on the board.
